
THE COOL NEWSPAPER

I hate two week long breaks, much like Mondays, unlike bananas!

Introducing the Cool Newspaper!

I know what you're thinking. This is gonna be another lame school newspaper, for lame people, writing lame stuff, and it'll be lame. But you're wrong! This is The Cool Newspaper, and it's the newspaper of the people! We are not here to deliver the news, we are here for a good time, although probably not a long time! If we get shut down, so be it! We have the dream team writing it! There's Finn, the name guy! Imagine if Chris Pratt wasn't at all like Chris Pratt and he was instead Finn.

There's Sophia, who has never seen Kung Fu Panda. We are considering her termination for this reason. Next is Ben! He's the first member of the DK Crew, and my personal hero! And then there's me, Daniel. I've been described by the rest of the team as, "Taxes, silly, candle, gangly, and diplomatic." I don't get it either. Our leader is Ms. Reilly, who hates metal, the sound of metal, tin cans, metal utensils, and the song Dance Monkey (with good reason). We've got a lot of good stuff this week, such as Why Alexander Hamilton is the Best President Ever, and an EXCLUSIVE interview with our very own Mrs. Salgado! Please note that this newspaper is satirical, and not at all serious. I think. So without further adieu, The Cool Newspaper!

New Advice Column!

Yo cool newspaper squad, need to hit us up with some questions? E-mail us at "thecoolnewspapero@gmail.com" or handwrite it and drop it off in Ms. Reilly's mailbox. Don't worry, you don't gotta put your name and it will most likely be featured in our "Cool Advice Column". 'Tis all. Peace!

Is The Word “Ploopy” Offensive? Experts Say Yes.

Have you ever used the word “ploopy”? If so, you may have said an offensive word. Experts at NYU have experimented on all age groups to see which were more offended, and all the results all came back the same. EVERYONE was offended. The word is derived for the latin term Ploopicus which roughly translates to something we can't repeat, or we would get shut down for sure. “I really don't get it,” Martin Young says. He is one of the ten people in the young adult category of the experiments. “People who use the term should be ashamed.” Straight facts, Martin. Why do people use it? Some believe it's to express anger. Others, just because. If you hear anyone say this term, please tell a trusted adult. We also interviewed a few more people. Have a look. 3rd grader Little Petey said, “I heard some older kids using it at the playground, after they fell off the monkey-bars, and I went home and cried and cried. I didn't know what it meant, but it sounded really mean.” “Back in my day,” said old Jeremy James from the elderly category. “People could say the ‘ploopy’ all they wanted. Now we can't even say-” if we were to continue, it would be bad for our further issue's probability of being read.

Top Ways to Spend the Break!

If you're anything like us at the Cool Newspaper, you're probably sitting at home right now thinking, "Well, they just sprung a 2 week break on us, how am I gonna spend it?" And that's where we come in! We're gonna list out some of the top ways to spend our two week break due to... well... circumstances out of our control. If you're reading this over break, listen up! And if you're reading once school has gotten back in session, well, still listen, for future vacations!

First thing you're gonna wanna do is get some sleep! Sleep is great because it 100% solves all your problems, and every waking moment of your life is pain anyway! Be careful to not let the Shadow Man watch you sleep, though. Or else bad things will happen. Bad, bad things.

Another really fun thing to do over break is to waste your time obsessing over something cringey that you did 4 years ago. Like, when your crush said, "How are you?" and you said, "Not much." Might I recommend that you do this in place of the previous suggestion.

If you're stuck inside all day because of rain, there's a really fun family activity I saw on Pinterest for all of our readers! It's sort of a freelance activity. All you'll need is a can of gas and some matches. You can go wild past that point. Burn down the house for all I care, it's really not my problem.

If you took that last advice, then you're probably in a "correctional facility" right now, wondering how to spend your new, longer break from society! Well, I learned that avoiding eye-contact and carving soap is a very good usage of time. No one wants to beat up the soap carving guy.

But above all else, the biggest advice I can give for you all, and I'm sorry if this gets a little preachy and serious, is to read every last word of The Cool Newspaper, and to watch our interview with Mrs. Salgado. Stay safe out there, unless you didn't do that last part.

An Exclusive Interview w/ Mrs. Salgado

S: Mrs. Salgado D: Daniel F: Finn

In this week's exclusive interview, Daniel and Finn decided to interview the beloved chorus teacher, and take a look into her opinion on Nickelback and the moon. Be sure to check out the full interview on The Cool Newspaper YouTube Channel!

D: What is your stance on Nickelback?

S: Nobody likes Nickelback!

D: I feel like this is a very important question, to tell whether or not we'll be able to have a professional relationship.

S: Absolutely!

D: Because if you like Nickelback, I don't know that I can be around you!

S: Saying you like Nickelback is like saying that you don't like bacon. I don't know how far our friendship can go.

D: Like, I can say hello if I see you, but a little bit will die inside me.

S: A little bit of your heart will break off. Just don't do it. Don't listen to their music. We're doing you a favor.

F: Are you one of those people who thinks the moon is real?

S: Are you asking me if it's made of cheese? Because if you are, then it's a definite yes! And I got my information from Wikipedia, which we all know is a credible source.

D: I agree, but do you think it's actually real? Like, it's in the sky?

F: Like not a hologram?

S: I do, and if I could take a spaceship into space right now, I would.

D: That's a rough one.

F: If there were no legal repercussions, what would you do?

D: Yeah, you can do anything. Keep it PG.

S: Just here, or in life?

D: Just in general.

S: Well, I don't know how valid this is, but a friend told me that flash mobs are illegal. Like, a gathering of people to do stuff, and I don't know if I'm about that.

D: They probably think it's organized crime.

S: I think that there should be a law, that says you must dance every day, with jazz hands.

D: Once in your lifetime, you have to join a flash mob once. I think that's a good law.

S: In fact, maybe that's where we take this. A BMS flash mob??? I'm just gonna leave that there for you all to think about.

D: That has nothing to do with the newspaper.

S: There is no affiliation with what I just said with you guys.

Mark Zuckerberg Pirates Popular Children's Toy!

Mark Zuckerberg was caught red handed on Saturday night. It was discovered that he was a lead on the shameless act of pirating American Girl Dolls. 12 police officers and a swat team were called in, to arrest the 47 men and women working on the project. They were found in an abandoned K-Mart parking lot, after residents around the area reported hearing the American Girl Doll famous catch phrase, "I'm an American Girl Doll!" coming from somewhere in the store. We spoke to a resident from around the area, and here's what they had to say. "Jeez, Freddy Krueger was tamer!" said a former giraffeologist. Mark was taken to the United States Penitentiary Maximum Facility Prison. He pled not guilty. His argument was, "I didn't do nothin'! Those American Girl Dolls were already there! In my nineteen lives, I've never seen something more insulting! I am founder of the Facebook. lizard noises" A rumor has it that one of the people helping with the dirty work on the project was Joseph Gatto, known more popularly as Captain Fat Belly of the Tenderloins. He hasn't responded to any of our calls. The American Girl Dolls have been burned, and the K-Mart has recently been closed due to something completely unrelated. Next week, why the Chuck-E-cheese Mascots are the tax frauds we've been looking for. Especially that gosh forbidden chef. That dirty scoundrel.

Weekly Sports Update

Have you heard of turtle wrestling? The popular sport is very healthy and good for the environment. Two players are thrown into a boxing ring with turtles, and must wrestle with them! Whoever wrestles the most turtles wins! The catch? There is no catch. Go ham on those turtles!!

This sport is very environmentally friendly! You know how that annoying girl with a metal waterbottle in your math class is always screaming about wanting to save turtles? This is actually because of overpopulation of turtles in the oceans. This sport will reduce the population of annoying sea turtles.

This week is an extraordinary match for Turtle Wrestling, as Jimmy John Johnson will be facing Pete Nutterbutter at 5:30 PM, Saturday evening. This one is going to be a doozy, folks. Jimmy John Johnson is famous for his signature move, called "Punt the Turtle". Once he heard of the sport, he was so excited to start using his move legally! Pete Nutterbutter, fan favorite and bad-boy of the tournament, is ready to kick some shell. He told reporters today, "Boy, do I hate turtles. I can't stand their stupid turtle faces. Sometimes I buy plastic straws just to throw them in the ocean. Mmmmmm I hate turtles." This is shaping up to be a good night for the Turtle Wrestling community, but not at all for the turtles themselves.

This sport was created by Dr. Reginald Trutlwrestling in 1892 in Tallahassee Florida, and became a popular one overseas, which is why you've never heard of it. And if you've played it, then watch out for those FBI agents! In fact, not many people know this but one of the best Turtle Wrestlers is Markus "Notch" Alexej Persson of Minecraft. Before his blocky debut, Markus enjoyed slappin' around turtles 'till they were nothing but green piles of splat. Which actually inspired him to add turtles into Minecraft itself. Neat huh?

Next week in Turtle Wrestling, The Burger King takes on Ryan Doughty in the main event, with Your Uncle Tony facing Larry David! It looks to be another great week for Turtle Wrestling. Go Birds!

Why Alexander Hamilton was the Best President.

Not many people knew this, but Alexander Hamilton was the best president ever. He was inspired by the play on Broadway, Hamilton to live his life the exact same way. He was the inventor of the modern wheel, Google Chrome, and he wrote and directed Goodfellas. He wasn't a good president, he was a great president. He participated in the movement of getting rid of the banana Jolly Rancher. I bet you're saying, "There isn't banana Jolly Rancher!". That's because he got rid of it! He is famous for starring in the movie Click, starring Adam Sandler. Alexander Hamilton was the inspiration for kindness and his name is derived from the greek phrase Alexandius Hamilos, which loosely translates into, "Woah. That dude's cool." He is known for his portrayal of being a president. Sadly, he passed away on July 12th, 1804. He will be remembered for being a president that was good.
